Women of Literature

Emma Lazarus 1849-1887

Daughter of a wealthy American Jew, she produced a book of poems first in 1866. The 1881 progroms in Eastern Europe horrified her and she became one of the first Americans to suggest a homeland for the Jews in Palestine, Her efforts on behalf of Russian Gypsy and Jewish immigrants led to the founding of various relief agencies and New York's Hebrew Technical Institute. She wrote this poem the only one for which she is remembered - for a fund-raising auction to pay for the pedestal of the Statue of Liberty. It is cast in bronze and affixed to the pedestal.

Anna Maria Lenngren 1754-1817

Swedish poet who belongs to the period of transition from the enlightened to the Romantic era. She is the most beloved of Swedisg poets; her first poems published in periodicals included The Conseillen 1777, a satire on woman's triviality. She the began writing for the Stockholms-Posten, co-edited by her husband. Her work ranges from elegant satirical attacks on the upper classes to realistic idylls of country life. In later years she became more reactionary, warning women not to abandon traditional roles in favour of acquiring learning or public positions.

Gilka Machado 1893-1980

Brazilian poet who even at age 13, took the first three places in a literary contest promoted by the journal "A Imprensa". In 1915 she published her first book of poems, Cristais Partidos which attracted the critics' attention. In 1933 she was proclaimed Brazil's major poet, the one who had imposed symbolism in its latest phase in her strong and erotic poetry, provoking impact and appreciation. She was awarded the Machado de Assis award in 1979 by the Brazilian Academy of Literature for her work Poesias Completas.

Women of Literature

Louise Mack 1874-1935

Australian writer, she was a member of the 'Bulletin' staff and writer of its Women's Page from 1896-1901. During this time she wrote Teens 1897 and Girls Together 1898 drawing on her experiences at high school. In 1901 she went to England and then Florence where she edited a newspaper for the English residents. When World War I broke out she was in Belgium and recorded her adventures in A Woman's Experiences in the Great War 1915. She published several novels for adults mainly light romances such as The Red Rose of Summer 1909, Wife to Peter 1911, The Music Makers 1914 and The House of Daffodils 1915. Her breathless style and her concentration on a conventional version of love tended to date her novels. She is at her best and her least conventional in her writing for children especially the school trilogy Teens, Girls Together and Teens Triumphant 1933.

Lucy Maud Montgomery 1874-1942

Canadian romantic novelist, best known for Anne of Green Gables, a sentimentalised but often charming story of a spirited unconventional orphan who finds a home with an elderly couple. The book drew on the author's own girlhood experiences and on the rural life and traditions of Prince Edward Island. Earlier a journalist and school teacher, she achieved international success with both adults and children with the publication of Anne. Six sequels carrying Anne from girlhood to motherhood were less successful.

Polish writer whose writings are full of psychological analysis and realism but also contain scepticism. Her style is logical, quiet and concise with classic simplicity and great delicacy of touch. She wrote the plays House of Women and Day of His Return which assisted in the development of psychological drama in Poland but she was primarily a novelist.

Women of Literature

Ada Negri 1870-1945

Italian novelist and poet, she was a teacher from a working class family. After she separated from her husband, she lived in Switzerland and this period of her life furnished her with material for some of her fiction. During World War I she returned to Italy and worked in a hospital. Mainly she lived a somewhat reclusive life. Her poetry, at first packed with socio-political comment, gradually became less politically vocal. She did appear to be linked with the Fascists in the beginning but had distanced herself from them by the time World War II broke out. Much of her writing has a religious tone though her later works concentrate on women's role in society. She won many prizes for her work and was a member of Accademia d'Italia. Her works include Fate and Other Poems 1892, Storms 1894, Maternity 1904, Solitary Women 1917, Sisters 1929 and Morning Star 1928, an autobiographical text about her childhood.

Kate O'Brien 1897-1974

Irish novelist, biographer and travel writer. She was educated at University College, Dublin and then lived in London and Spain. Although her first play Distinguished Villa (1926) was a great success in London, it was her first novel Without My Cloak (1931) which established her literary reputation winning the Hawthornden prize. A succession of brilliantly crafted and superbly readable novels followed: The Ante-Room (1934), Mary Lavelle (1936), Pray for the Wanderer (1938), The Land of Spices (1941), The Last of Summer (1943), That Lady (1946), The Flower of May (1953), As Music and Splendour (1958) and Presentation Parlour (1963). One of Ireland's great novelists, her fiction broke new ground in Irish writing by focusing on the prosperous Catholic bourgeoisie and by giving central importance to women's struggle for selfhood and the dilemmas of identity and sexuality in a rigidly sex-stereotyped society.
